Osceola Center Progress Continues Following Nursery Building Fire

Boosted by churches, individuals and Belle Glade civic clubs, chiefly the Civilians, the recreation program at Osceola Center is well on the road to full recovery from the fire which destroyed its nursery building recently.

Julian Griggs, in charge of the program through the Florida Christian Ministry to Migrants outlined the recovery to The Herald this week. Nursery care, expansion and a full recreation program, now in full swing at the center, he said.

Griggs was rich in his praise for the community of Belle Glade, and particularly the Civilians, for their help.

"This $400 (donated by Civilians) gives a magnificent lift to the program and will get our recreation, archery and shop programs back on the map," he added his praise to the Belle Glade Housing Authority for their help.

Vocational training and archery competition is planned for the fall, he went on.

First of all, operating from a reconstructed assembly hall, a full-time nursery was in operation for the last month. Workers for the program come chiefly from voluntary work of the Church of the Brethren.

The Miami Shores Community Church furnished enough women wire to make an enclosure for small children's recreation.

Out of temporary storage rooms, bedrooms and partitions will come a library, ping pong room and an equipment check-out room, plus a sewing and ceramics room. The Housing Authority alone has spent approxibe constructed second floor in the assembly room for the nursery.

Power and hand tool shops are also to be added, Griggs went on. An archery room is also in the offing.

Seven workers staff the program. A typical week sees the following activities:

Sunday: Sunday School and interdenominational church services. Monday through Friday: one worker with the Girl Scout day program teaching archery; two workers, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Connelly, working with Osceola School's summer recreation program; three workers carrying out the building, repair and painting program; preparing the athletic program to come.

They're planning to help the Pahokee Housing Authority set up their Bible School classes which start next week.

Prior to the work of the Osceola nursery, the program of a nursery was co-sponsored by Everglades American Legion Post 20 in association with a national church organization.

The old legion hall, now Belle Glade Motors, became the care center which provided a registered nurse and balanced meals and full-time care for the children of working migrant workers.

Packing houses donated vegetables and business firms donated other expense money and goods. The organization was known as the Community Service, Inc.

After being in operation for about three years, the federal government was requested to provide nursery facilities in each of the labor camps. The Housing Authority took over from there. Julian Griggs and his seven fellow workers are still on the job.

Separate bathroom facilities are already available. A kitchen, with work donated by the center carpenters, is now in full operation. Future plans call for an additional store room plus at least two bedrooms on a yet-to-

Ten Year Service Emblems Presented At 183rd Anniversary of US C of E

One hundred and eighty-three years ago on June 16, 1775 the Corps of Engineers was organized to give engineering support to General George Washington's Revolutionary Army.

To commemorate the Corps' birthday, a joint ceremony will be held today, June 16, in the Area Engineer Office and the Cleveland Project Office at Cleveland.

Cicero W. Pritchett and Milton E. Gross of the Cleveland Office received ten-year service emblems.

Culley M. Fletcher was awarded a thirty-year emblem in Jacksonville today by the District Engineer, Colonel Paul D. Troxler.

The Area and Cleveland Project Engineer Offices at Cleveland are part of the largest engineering organization in the world—an organization which has grown from the three-man Engineering Corps established 183 years ago. Today its dual civil and military set-up—whereby by construction work during peace time affords Army Engineers the training needed for accomplishment of the gigantic construction tasks of wartime—constitute it as an engineering organization—in being, ready to step immediately into the task of furnishing logistical support for our armies in time of national emergency.

The Area Engineer at Cleveland, Col. A. R. Byrd, is charged with administration and supervision of civil works projects for the Corps of Engineers in the Ohio, Mississippi, Missouri, Central and South Florida, Flood Control Area, and a portion of the Gulf Coast Area. He has extensive control over the water level in Lake Okechobee and directs special emergency work during and following hurricanes and flood periods.

The Cleveland Project Engineer, Charles M. Weisenfeld, supervises all construction work in the Central and Southern Florida Flood Control Project. These two engineers at Cleveland are the official representatives of the Jacksonville District Engineer, Colonel Paul D. Troxler. The Jacksonville Office has charge of all river and harbor flood control work throughout the peninsula portion of Florida and the Caribbean area. In addition, the office performs all Army and Air Force construction in the same area.

Donald Fiehls, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fiehls, Sr., 543 S. E. 7th Drive, Belle Glade, has received a bachelor of business administration degree from the University of Miami at commencement exercises.

Crime Continues FBI Director Hoover Reports

"The 1957 fiscal year witnessed a continuation of the record wave of lawlessness which swept across the Nation in the postwar period." That is the grim opening sentence of the latest annual report of J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The story he has to tell is a sorry one.

Each minute throughout the year nearly five major crimes were committed—and a homicide, rape or attempt to kill occurred about every four minutes. Crimes against property happened with a regularity as demands upon the FBI and other law enforcement agencies were extremely heavy.

There is, however, a brighter side to the ledger. In fiscal 1957, 98.7 per cent of persons tried in federal court as a result of FBI investigations pled or were found guilty, and the number of such convictions reached a 10-year high of 112,414.

This figure does not include a great number of other convictions obtained in state court and based on the evidence gathered by the FBI.

The FBI has a wider range of responsibilities than, probably, is generally recognized, and it is frequently widened further by Congressional legislation. In the past year, for instance, legislation gave the Bureau new or extended jurisdiction in cases of kidnapping, the interstate transportation of stolen goods, thefts from banking-type institutions, and malicious damage to aircraft or motor vehicles.

moving in interstate or foreign commerce.

Also, the FBI has the extremely important and delicate duty of protecting the civil rights and privileges of the people of this country. This is a field where misinformation and controversy are apt to be rife.

For a number of years the FBI held a series of civil rights schools for police organizations, and special agents of the Bureau have made hundreds of lectures on the subject. The magnitude of the job is indicated by the fact that in fiscal 1956, 1,289 preliminary investigations of civil rights allegations were investigated.

An increasingly important area of FBI responsibility is in the field of domestic intelligence. The purpose is to protect the internal security of the United States and to combat espionage, sabotage, subversive activities and related threats.

And here Mr. Hoover's report has some significant things to say about the Communist Party, USA. Despite certain setbacks, he says that "a hard core consisting of thousands of dedicated Marxists in this country has clung to its un-American ideals and emerged into what it interprets as an atmosphere conducive to regrowth and attainment of its goals."

The Party's leaders, for the most part, have long-established records of conspiring to teach and advise the members of the government by force and violence. It is dominated by the threat from the Soviet Union. And the members are some of the most expert at seeking refuge behind the very rights and privileges which they would destroy.

In addition, the Party has successfully devised various "front" groups which are used to duped loyal citizens in supporting and promoting campaigns which will serve its ends in one way or another.

Mr. Hoover's report is brief, but well-documented and comprehensive. It shows that the war against crime in all its manifold ramifications must be waged more intensely with each passing year.

Vitamin-Rich Greens Pep Up Summer Meals

Popular green vegetables rich in vitamin A include spinach, broccoli and green peppers. Vitamin A protects eyes and skin health and helps guard against colds and sore throats. Carrots are rich in this vitamin, too.

Most salads are rich in vitamin C, says Miss Todd. This vitamin is essential for healthy body tissues and is especially important for healthy gums and teeth. Along with vitamins A and C, these vegetables supply minerals that are important for good health, too.

The Palm Beach County Home Demonstration Agent recommends four or more servings of vegetables and fruits every day, including at least one high in vitamin C and one high in vitamin A.

To protect the vitamins and minerals these vegetables provide, buy and serve them when they are fresh and crisp. Wilting vegetables have lost not only quality but food values as well. Cook vegetables in small quantities of water just until tender. Be careful not to overcook. Use any cooking water left in sauce, gravies or soups. Don't soak vegetables. And, when making salads, cut the vegetables just before serving.

One's love for God is equal to the love one has for the man he loves least.

He Made Women Walk

Sometimes I wonder how Doc Buck would make out today among these new jet-age doctors. You know, these fee-sycians who cure you with a needle in one location or a receipt book in the other and half a dozen prescriptions in between. When Doc came to Belle Glade was back in the winter of 1928-29, he was the only doctor between Pahokee and Moore Haven.

We already had a drug store here, a good one too. Even before Casey Alston put in his prescription counter, you could get Epsom salts, Sloan's Liniment and Three Sixes, and most anything a body would need.

I guess Doc had a hypodermic needle but he didn't scarcely ever use it. He figured people would pay him sooner or later, and most of them did sooner or later. If Jim Jones was to come sloshing through the rain some night and say, "Doc, my old lady is fixin' to have a young'un before dawn. I'd be mighty proud if you could come over to Little Bear Beach and kind of help out. My boat's down to the canal bridge." You suppose Doc would ask him, "Why in heck didn't you pay me for that last young'un after you picked your beans?" No, he'd say, "Just wait till I get my boots on," and away he'd go.

He was the same way about paying his own bills, but everybody was obligated to him in one way or another, so they didn't scarcely ever demand payment.

One of the first things he did in Belle Glade was to organize the first American Legion post in the Everglades. He was twice elected its commander. It appears that Doc Buck had earned quite an enviable military reputation. He had been down on the Mexican border chasing rattlesnakes and Pancho Villa until the big war, when he went to France.

Over in LeMans, it was Colonel William J. Buck, U. S. Army, who was in charge of the 2900 Red Base Hospital of the 32nd Division, and it was Col. Buck who was personally commended by Gen. Pershing for the hospital's professional and administrative excellence, and they said Black Jack Pershing was not too lavish in handing out such commendations.

Doc was a natural born administrator and it was a lucky thing for some of us crackers that he was. The morning after the hurricane of September 1928, Belle Glade, Cross and South Bay had almost disappeared.

Water which the previous night had surged through to a depth of seven or eight feet, was still knee deep. Every house was unroofed, demolished or detached away. Over 2,000 dead lay everywhere. The only roads, those to W. Palm Beach, South Bay Cross and Pahokee were hidden under uncountable tons of debris. Food might be obtained from wrecked stores, but there was no drinking water and nowhere to sleep except in the one undamaged building, Tedder's Hotel.

As the people came struggling into what was left of town, Doc declared that all women and children must leave at once. Well, that was just good sense, but there was no way to leave except to walk. There was a heap of grumbling. Some didn't want to leave their husbands. Some didn't see how they could carry their babies. None of them craved to walk the 42 miles to W. Palm Beach, but Doc said that was the only way. Numbering about a hundred, they scrambled over piles of hyacinths, branches of custard apples, dodged around wrecked floors and roofs and deceased cows, circled several houses stranded on roadbeds and waded knee deep through the low places. Every now and then there would be a shower of rain. Buddy, that was a mad bunch of white women.

It was that way most of the three miles to the Experiment Station. Some of the women stopped there, but the road was clear from here on, so about half, to show how tough they were, walked three miles more to Six Mile Bridge. Here they clustered in and around the house of the bridge-tender, H. H. Register, until a Ferguson ambulance and some cars sent by the Red Cross, arrived that afternoon. Later when Doc Buck came to town, though, the women thanked him.

Belle Glade had recently been incorporated, but the only paid employee was the town marshal. Using the only available organization, the American Legion, Doc Buck took charge. With Legionnaires as foremen, he organized work crews. The workers had lost everything they owned, and some even members of their own families, yet, with hand tools from the wrecked stores, they started clearing the roads.

If you had seen the amount of debris heaped on all the roads, you would have thought it was impossible, but by noon the next day they had cleared the three miles to the Experiment Station, the four miles to South Bay and the mile to Chosen, well enough for cars to get through.

Doc got hold of an army square tent and set it up next the hotel. It was his office and residence for months. Most of the people were alright or dead. He supervised the search for survivors and for bodies. He requisitioned food and cots for workers and a continuous supply of liquor for those who handled the corpses.

When Legionnaires from other towns, and the Red Cross, the National Guard and Coast Guard arrived, he told them what needed to be done. For 82 hours he did not close his eyes. During the following weeks of rescue, relief and rehabilitation Doc Buck was the unofficial boss of this part of the Everglades. Some folks on the coast got the idea that Belle Glade and Dr. Buck were synonymous terms. There was even a move to try to have him awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

After Belle Glade had recovered somewhat from the effects of the storm, Doc continued to be one of the civic leaders as the settlement suffered from the growing pains of a thriving town. The first street paving was to be two blocks south and two blocks west from the bridge. The plan was to pave only 24 feet wide. Curbs and sidewalks were being built, so Doc directed the council to pave from curb to curb, the abutting owners to be taxed for the job. The owners squawked but they were never soy for the pavement. He organized the first Community Sunday School and was its first president. Attracted by outstanding church and city men who were brought here, the attendance was sometime a hundred. Dr. Buck also helped start the Rotary Club and was first president of that, as well. He was also first chairman of the Community Red Cross Committee.

When a hospital was set up in Pahokee who do you suppose was its first Chief of Staff? Why, Doc Buck of course, and likewise when Belle Glade got a hospital he, naturally, was chief of staff there.

Although he was a Shriner and an Elk, his favorite organization was the American Legion. After being commander of the local post, he became Vice Commander of the district reaching from Vero Beach to Key West, and served on several state Committees.

When his work was over, Doc liked to have his fun. In congenial company he could drink more liquor and show it less than anybody in the Glades, yet if suddenly called on in an emergency, he was as sober and efficient as a county judge, much to the amazement of all the natives.

In January of 1949, while still comparatively young, Doc's overworked ticker crinkled out. He died as he had lived, broke but loved, honored and respected. All who knew him felt that they had lost a personal friend and the Glades lost its outstanding citizen. I reckon you could truly say that Doc Buck was a friend of man, yes, and did not forget the women.

THE CHANGING SCENE

Our changing way of life is in effect a guarantee against a long recession or a depression. The demand for new projects for comfortable living puts money into circulation and creates jobs in industry which in turn provides additional money for the economic slump.

Beginning with this issue of THE HERALD the Glades Gas Company will present a series of cartoons entitled "The Changing Scene". We believe readers will enjoy the comparison of the old way with the new in each cartoon. Vernon Dexter, manager of the Glades Gas Company stated, "You may view with a twinge of nostalgia the 1908 cartoon segments showing firing the furnace and stove, heating the bath water, bringing in the wash from the line, clipping ice, burning garbage, and going to town in the old horse drawn farm wagon. But you will all agree that the modern way is a boon to the comfort of many of us who you contrast the 1958 segments with the scenes of 50 years ago," he said.

These cartoons were prepared in behalf of an industry group representing major household appliance manufacturers, petroleum companies, and retail marketers of fuel sold in town and agricultural areas.

Hendry County First; PBC Fifth In Per Capita Income

Hendry County, our neighbor to the west, had the highest per capita income of Florida's 67 counties during 1956, the Bureau of Economic and Business research of the College of Business Administration at the University of Florida reports this week.

The small predominantly agricultural county achieved this because its income increased while its population varied little. Dr. Wiley Kilpatrick, research professor of the Bureau reports.

Dade County was second, Duval County third while Palm Beach County ranked fifth. Dr. Kilpatrick explains some of the differences in per capita income this way:

"Big growth in amount of income, when "accompanied by big growth in population, as occurred in most of the large counties, resulted in moderate percentage rises in income per capita."

Dr. Kilpatrick's article compares the personal income received in Florida counties during 1956 with figures from 1954 and 1950.

The Economic Leaflet is sent free to Florida residents who request it from the university.

No mutinies have occurred on United States Naval vessels.
